4 Basic Ways to Save at the Pump

1. Slow down, killer!

Life's not always a race. Having a lead foot is not always the best thing for your gas tank. More specifically, accelerate slowly (10 to 15 seconds) and obey the speed limit. Accelerating slowly and braking less while allowing your vehicle to coast in traffic is the easiest way to increase your fuel economy.

2. Tune it up!

Has it been a while since your last tune-up or oil change for your vehicle? A freshly tuned-up engine makes for an overall more efficient experience on the road.

3. Idle engines are the gas devil's workshop.

If you aren't going anywhere for at least a few minutes, turn off your car! However, be cautious how often you stop and restart your vehicle. Stopping and restarting your engine is roughly equivalent to being idle for 1 minute.

4. Resist the resistance!

Keep those tires properly inflated. Next time you go to the grocery store next to your house, keep the windows up. Doing the little things will get you more bang for your buck in the gasoline world.
